A curious Anecdote, relative to OLIVER CROMWELL.

From Lord ORRERY's State Papers.

IN the year 1657, Oliver entered into a league, offenſive and defenſive, with France againſt Spain, in which he would not allow the French King to call himſelf King of France, but only of the French, and took to himſelf the title of Protector, not of England, Scotland and Ireland alone, but of France alſo. And in the inſtrument of the treaty, he inſiſted that his, the Protector's name, ſhould be put before that of the French monarch; and it was done ſo accordingly. In ſhort, I knew of no Prince that bore his character ſo high as Oliver did in his treaties with crowned heads.

In the ſame year 1657, during the time of the heats about Oliver's acceptance of the Crown and title of King, which were propoſed to him by the Parliament, there was a private negotiation for a marriage between the Protector's youngeſt daughter, Frances and King Charles II. then in exile, and diſtitute of all hopes of recovering his Kingdom. It was concerted by the Lord Broghill, afterwards Earl of Orrery, who was not only very high in Cromwell's confidence, but actually had addreſs enough to procure the young King's conſent to ſuch a treaty, and received his Majeſty's orders to do whatever lay in his power towards promoting it. Thus having the King's leave, he took a fit opportunity to open the affair to Cromwell, which he did in the following manner: He firſt acquainted Cromwell's wife and daughter with his deſign, and then cauſed the rumour of it to be ſpread abroad in the town. Coming out of the city one day, and going to Cromwell, the Protector, as they were alone, aſked him where he had been? Lord Broghill, anſwered, In the city. Cromwell aſked, what news there? The former replied, Very ſtrange news. The Protector earneſtly enquiring what, his Lordſhip detained him a while, only by repeating, It was ſtrange news, and ſmiling at the ſame time. Cromwell, by his delay, became the more earneſt to know what it was: At laſt, Lord Broghill replied, Perhaps he would be offended to hear it.

Cromwell, being unable to endure any longer delay, aſſured him he would not; and therefore conjured him to diſcloſe the thing immediately. Upon that, his Lordſhip, in a jocular way, told him all the news in the city was, that he was going to marry his daughter Frances to the King, who was to be reſtored upon conditions. Cromwell then, with a merry countenance, aſked him, "And what do the fools think of it?"——My Lord replied, all liked it, and thought it the wiſeſt thing he could do, if he could accompliſh it. The Protector made a ſtand; and looking ſteadfaſtly in my Lord Broghill's face, aſked him, "And do you believe ſo too?" His Lordſhip ſeeing him a little moved, ſaid he did belive it was the beſt thing he could do to ſecure himſelf. Cromwell then walked up and down the room with his hands behind him, in a very thoughtful manner: At length, he aſked Lord Broghill, what reaſon he had to be of that belief? His Lordſhip repreſented to him how little he could confide in thoſe of his own party, who were on every occaſion, ſubject to murmur and repine; how unlikely it was for him to continue long in that grandeur; the very ſame perſons who ſet him up, being willing to pull him down; and on the other hand, the King in his great exigencies, would be ready enough to hearken to any propoſitions, rather than live in exile; ſo that the Protector might make his own terms with him, and be the General of all the forces during life; that the loyal party would readily join with him in the work; and if his daughter had children by the King, which was likely enough, he would by that means be endeared to King and Country, and would have ſuch intereſt in the Crown, that nobody could ever attempt any thing againſt him, having a King his ſon-in-law, a Prince of Wales his grandſon, and the whole power of the nation in his own hands; by all which, his greatneſs would be for ever eſtabliſhed; whereas, if he neglected theſe means, he could not expect to tranſmit his greatneſs to his next heir, and perhaps would hardly be able to preſerve it during his own life.

Cromwell gave great attention to theſe reaſons; but, walking two or three turns, and pondering within himſelf, he told Lord Broghill, the King would never forgive his father's blood. His Lordſhip deſired him to employ ſomebody to ſound the King in this matter, to ſee how he would take it, and offered himſelf to mediate in it for him; adding, that the Protector was one out of many that were concerned in the late King's death, but would be alone in the merit of reſtoring him: But Cromwell would not conſent, and again repeated, "Charles Stuart, cannot and will not forgive the death of his father; beſides, he is ſo damnably debauched, he will undo us all." The Protector then left Lord Broghill, who durſt not tell him he had already dealt with his Majeſty in that affair. Upon this, my Lord withdrew; and meeting Cromwell's wife and daughter, they enquired how he had ſucceeded; of which having given them an account, he added, they muſt try their intereſt in him: but none could ever prevail, guilt lay ſo heavy upon him, that he thought there could be no reconciliation. So this buſineſs broke off.

This Anecdote is not mentioned by the great Earl of Clarendon; who, for the honour of the King his maſter, might be induced to paſs it over in ſilence; but it is an indiſputable fact; being mentioned not only by Biſhop Burnett, who had it from the Lord Broghill's own mouth; but is very circumſtantially related by his Lordſhip's chaplain, Mr. Morrice, in the collection of the Earl of Orrery's ſtate papers; from which two authorities I have compiled the above account.——This daughter of the Protector was afterwards married to the Hon. Robert Rich, ſon of Lord Rich, and grandſon to the Earl of Warwick.

TO THE PRINTER.

SIR,

I Am induced from a motive of humanity to requeſt you to publiſh the following remedy, which I have found (in a very extenſive practice) to be an almoſt infallible cure for moſt diſorders of the ſtomach and bowels, which are now very rife both in town and country, particularly reachings, cholickly complaints, dry gripes, watry gripes in children, diarrhœas, and dyſenteries. The medecine I mean is the columbo rooot, which, though far from being generally known to the Britiſh phyſicians has been uſed with amazing ſucceſs abroad.——The doſe for a grown perſon is from twelve to ſixteen grains, to be taken in ſpear mint or balm tea, and repeated once in four hours, until it procure the deſired effect. The moſt eligible way of adminiſtering it to Infants, will be to mix twenty grains of the powder, with a gill of ſpear mint water, half an ounce of ſyrup of corn poppies, and two ſcruples of magneſia alba, mixt together, of which a tea-ſpoonful may be given to the child once in four or ſix hours, or if it ſucks, the mother or nurſe may take a table ſpoonful once in four hours (diluted with a little mint water) which probably will have the deſired effect upon the child.

I am perſuaded, that the columbo root, will be found on trial, to be ſuperior to moſt other ſtomatics, and in many caſes equal to the celebrated bark, and will be a good ſubſtitute for that noble medecine, where patients have an inſuperable prejudice againſt it. In particular caſes, where the ſtomach rejects the columbo root in powder, an eſſence may be made from it, which will be ſecond to no medecine whatever, as an antiemetic, (particularly for relieving thoſe reaching to which the fair ſex are liable on the early ſtate of pregnancy) by digeſting about eight ounces of the root in a gallon of French brandy, richly impregnated with camomile flowers, and leaves of the ſpear and pepper mint. A medecine thus prepared will be a very valuable addition to the Materia-Medica, and may be taken by grown perſons, to the quantity of a large ſpoonful in mint or balm tea, and repeated every third or fourth hour, which will ſpeedily relieve all cholickly complaints ariſing from flatulencies or indegeſtion, as it will wonderfully ſtrengthen the ſtomach and bowels, and expel all manner of crudites therefrom.

To a FRIEND.

FREE from the Buſtle, Care and Strife,
Of this ſhort variagated Life,
Oh! let me ſpend my Days
In rural Sweetneſs with a Friend,
To whom my Mind I may unbend,
Nor Cenſure heed, or Praiſe.

II.

Riches bring Cares:—I aſk not Wealth:
Let me enjoy but Peace and Health,
I envy not the Great;
'Tis theſe alone can make me bleſt,
The Riches take of Eaſt and Weſt,
I claim not thoſe, or State.

III.

Though not extravagant, not near,
But through the well ſpent chequer'd Year
I'd have enough to live,
To drink a Bottle with a Friend,
Aſſiſt him in Diſtreſs—ne'er lend—
But rather freely give.

IV.

I two would wiſh, to ſweeten Life,
A gentle, kind, good natur'd Wife,
Young, ſenſible, and fair:
One who could love but me alone,
Prefer my Cot to e'en a Throne,
And ſooth my ev'ry Care.

V.

Thus happy with my Wife and Friend,
My Life I chearfully would ſpend,
With no vain Thoughts oppreſt;
If Heav'n has Bliſs for me in Store,
Oh! grant me this! I aſk no more;
And I am truly bleſt.

AMERICAN INTELLIGENCE.

HALIFAX, (Nova-Scotia) November 29.

WE learn by a gentleman lately returned from the River St. John's, that as James Simonds, Esq; an inhabitant of that place, with his people, was, some time last fall, digging a foundation for a saw-mill at the mouth of a creek, upon the north side of the harbour, opposite Fort-Frederick, after digging about eight or ten feet, came across an old wreck, several of the timbers of which they dug up that were as sound as when first taken from the stump, but turned black; the iron bolts that passed through the knees and other parts were all wasted to rust. By the size of the several pieces of timber taken out it must have been a ship of about 200 tons burthen. As this is but a small creek or rivulet, and the place where this wreck was found entirely out of the way of all winds and sea, she must have been a long time in burying so deep in the earth; and we think it very probable it might have been a ship that was unfit for the sea, and left there by Monsr. L'Tour, about 130 years ago, who was then settled where Fort-Frederick now stands, and carried on a great trade with the Indians of that river.

BOSTON, MARCH 16.

We hear that last week the General Assembly, now sitting here, made choice of the Hon. Thomas Hutchinson, Esq; the Hon. William Brattle, Esq; and Capt. Edward Sheaffe, to be Commissaries on the part of this Province, to join with those to be appointed from New-York, to run the boundary line between the two provinces.

We also hear that they have made choice of Dennis Deberdt, Esq; of London, as a proper Person to whom the report of the Committee and the Papers accompanying the same, respecting the boundary line between the Province of Maine and New-Hampshire, may be sent.

MARCH 23. Wednesday the 18th instant, a day sacred to the Liberties of America, being the Anniversary of the Repeal of the Stamp-Act, was celebrated with excessive joy; and every token expressive of gratitude and supreme satisfaction.—The dawning Sun was saluted with a thunder of applause bellowing from a number of cannon, and a regular and beautiful parade, of the Sons of Liberty through the great street of the town, with music preceding a cannon, adorned with the loyal Flag waving about it; the venerable Elm of Liberty was variegated with a multitude of streamers most beautifully disposed among its branches, and the houses of many of the inhabitants were distinguished by the same trophy—The burst of joy reverberated from one part of the town to the other the whole forenoon, from the busy mouths of well fed cannon,—in the afternoon, by the vote of the town, a profusion of wines and other liquors were prepared in Faneuil-Hall, to collect the genuine sons of joy, to celebrate this happy festival; accordingly a large company of the principal inhabitants crowded that spacious apartment, and with loud huzzas and repeated acclamations (at each of the TOASTS) saluted the glorious and memorable Patrons of America, particularly those who distinguished themselves in the cause of Liberty, while we were groaning under the iron hand of oppression—At the close of the day, the company retired to different houses in town to conclude the festivity with the collations supplied by the private expence of some oppulent gentlemen---when Faneuil-Hall was beautifully illuminated, and the several houses where the companies were collected blazed with a profusion of candles—But the Tree of Liberty chiefly attracted the notice of the town, being richly shaded with the splendor issuing from 108 lanthorns, disposed in beautiful order.——Nothing could possibly exceed the grandeur of its appearance; and throughout the town, music and mirth, gratulation and joy betrayed the exalted satisfaction which took place in every breast on this thrice happy occasion.

We hear from Portsmouth, that the Sons of Liberty also made rejoicings there on this memorable occasion.

NEWPORT, (Rhode-Island) MARCH 16.

The Anniversary of the Repeal of the STAMP-ACT happens on Wednesday next, the 18th day of March,—a day auspicious to America, and sacred to Liberty.—The event of that day will undoubtedly be celebrated, by the friends of freedom and this country, for ages to come: An event the most important and interesting to this Continent of any since the settlement thereof by British subjects.——Had a monarch of less benignity and clemency than GEORGE the Third, sat on the British throne, surrounded by a tyrannic set of Grenvillians,—the consequence of our noble efforts, for the preservation of freedom, would have been shocking to humanity. But, thanks be to GOD, a PITT, a CONWAY, a BARRE, and a numerous list of other illustrious worthies, the firm and undanted assertors of constitutional freedom, appeared in the British senate, and, with Ciceronian eloquence, displayed the justice of our complaints;—our gracious and benign Sovereign espoused the cause, and, let it for ever be remembered, on the GLORIOUS EIGHTEENTH DAY OF MARCH, ONE THOUSAND SEVEN HUNDRED AND SIXTY-SIX, by his royal assent to an act for repealing the Stamp-Act, diffused inexpressible joy among millions of his most faithful and loyal subjects ——May the importance of this memorable transaction be fully transmitted to the latest posterity;—and may the GLORIOUS ANNIVERSARY never past unnoticed.

NEW-YORK, MARCH 26.

A few very mischievous spirits among the soldiery, supposed to be of the lowest rank, quartered in the barracks in this city, have again for this week past been endeavouring to raise ill-will and disturbance, between the citizens and the soldiers. The causes of such a malevolent disposition towards the inhabitants is unknown, as well as the persons possessed of it.----It particularly shews itself on occasions, when every true friend to the English nation and government, every one who wishes its prosperity, and the preservation of its happy constitution, should feel dispositions of a quite opposite kind,—an affectionate regard for a people so firmly attached to that constitution which is the glory and happiness of Englishmen, so loyal to his Majesty, and resolutely determined to defend and support, at the hazard of their lives and fortunes, him, and every order in the nation, in the full enjoyment of their just rights and privileges.—Such principles and tempers, universally prevalent with the people here, which would have endeared them to every true Englishman, excites, it seems, the enmity of those lurking foes to peace and good order, to liberty and happiness, to the British King and government.

After the entertainments on Wednesday the 18th instant, (in commemoration of the repeal of the Stamp-Act, which if it had taken place, must have ruined the whole British empire) the evening having concluded with great good humour and harmony,----the mast erected on the common, inscribed to his Majesty, Mr. Pitt, and Liberty, on occasion of the repeal, was in the night cut down. Next day the inhabitants erected another, more large and substantial, secured with iron to a considerable heighth above ground. The same night attempts were made both to cut it down, and to undermine and dig it down----but without effect. On Saturday night, the 21st, there was an attempt to destroy it by gunpowder, by boring a hole, and charging it with powder, but this also failed.-----Next night, Sunday, a strong watch was set by the citizens, at an adjacent house; a small company of soldiers in the night appeared with their coats turned, armed with bayonets and sticks, but no guns. Some of the watch went out, asked who they were, and their business? But received no satisfactory answer: They then drew up before the door where the watch was kept, but after a few words thought proper to retire. On Monday, about six in the evening, a party of soldiers marched by the post, and as they passed by Mr. Bardin's tavern, fired their muskets, two of which were pointed at the house; next morning it was found that a ball had been fired thro' the house, and another into one of the timbers.-----On Tuesday, about one o'clock in the afternoon, the same party as it is supposed, took a ladder from a new building, which they carried to the barracks, and were from thence proceeding towards the post----but being seen by an officer, he stopped and turned them back----and notice of this behaviour of the soldiers, getting to the Governor and General, and the magistrates of the city,----we hear strict orders were immediately given, and effectual measures taken to prevent disturbance, or any the like future occasion of it; since which all has been quiet, and we hope this matter, in itself trivial, and only considered as of importance by the citizens, as it shewed an intention to offend and insult them,----will occasion no farther difference.

On Friday last two proclamations were issued by his Excellency Sir Henry Moore, Bart. our Governor, notifying his Majesty's royal proclamations of the 17th of October 1763. One of which is strictly enjoining and forbidding all persons whatsoever, from purchasing any lands from the Indians within this colony, without licence first had and obtained for that purpose: The other strictly forbidding all persons from trading with the Indians without licence for that purpose; which licences would be granted on proper application; and all persons infringing those his Majesty's royal proclamations, may expect to answer it at their peril, with the utmost rigour of the law.

In the St. Kitt's Gazette, of February 14, 1767, is the deposition of William Harry, taken before Governor De Windt, of St. Eustatia, to the following purport, viz. That he sailed from Bristol, in June, 1765, on board the sloop William, for the coast of Africa, John Westcot, master, where they continued twelve months, purchasing slaves for a brig, and themselves, and afterwards proceeded to St. Kitts; that soon after they left the coast, the captain, for some reasons, beat and knocked down a seaman named Stephen Porter; that the next night, between eleven and twelve, the said Porter and Richard Hancock, murdered the captain and mate with a broad-axe, when asleep, the former on the round-house, and the latter in the cabbin; that the sloop was afterwards cast-away on the Isle of May, and the slaves were sold to the Portugueze for 50 dollars a head.

By some gentlemen in a short journey from Montreal, we have received the following

Extract of a letter from Montreal, dated the 12th of March.

"Major Disney, one of the gentlemen confined for the assault committed on Thomas Walker, Esq; on the 6th of December, 1764, and who has been in confinement for these four months last past, was yesterday arraigned and tried for his life; and after a trial of thirteen hours, the jury withdrew, and in half an hour brought in their virdict Not Guilty, on the strongest, clearest, and most distinct evidence on the part of the prisoner: The evidence on the part of the Crown in many instances being contradictory and inconsistent;——and the principal evidence on behalf of the Crown, George M'Govock, a soldier of the 28th regiment, appearing to the Court, the Jury, and every one present, to be an infamous perjured villain.

"The Council for the Prosecutor was Mr. Attorney-General; and for the prisoner, Counsellor Grigory, Counsellor Morrison, and Mr. Antill."

We are further informed, that an hour before they left Montreal, being on the day following of Major Disney's trial, they saw all the rest of the gentlemen (which had been in custody) discharged from their confinement.

PHILADELPHIA, MARCH 19.

Extract of a Letter from Barbados, February 16.

"The 11th instant, at two o'clock in the afternoon, a fire was discovered blazing through the roof of a shed, in the back yard of a Jew in Swan-Street, near the Milk-market, which was set on fire by a pillow stuffed up in the roof, and must have burnt two-thirds of the town, that escaped the former fires, had not the discovery been made in time.—The mob immediately pulled down all the wooden buildings near the spot, and would have pulled all down in the town, had not great pains been taken by the magistrates and fire-companies to dissuade them from it.—We expect that should we have another alarm of fire, every wooden building will be pulled down by the mob."

On the 3d instant, was killed by John George, butcher, in this city, the largest and fattest ox that has been seen in this province, or perhaps on the continent.——The whole weight of him was 2433 lb. the beef alone weighed 1616 lb. He was bred and raised by James Bratton, in Chester County, was seven years old, and cost fifty pounds.

The above List I received by Captain Walker, exhibiting the Disputants on each Side, in the House of Lords, in the Debate on the Legality of the King's laying an Embargo on the Exportation of Corn. It will probably be acceptable to your Readers. Lord SHELBURNE acquired great Honour in the Debate, and the Lord Chancellor CAMDEN overcame Lord MANSFIELD.

ANNAPOLIS, (Maryland) February 26.

Extract of a Letter from a Merchant in London, dated the 19th of November last.

"The real or artificial Scarcity of Corn having raised a great Clamour, and drove the Needy or Dissolute into Riots, Lord Chatham advised the laying an Embargo on the Exportation of Corn. This is made a Pretence for the Opposition to throw a Slur on the Ministry; but as the Measure was prudent, and even necessary, they did not venture to censure it, but said they thought an Act to indemnify the Advisers was proper; as the Prerogative was, as they said, illegally exercised. This was a Cut-Throat Favour, and was rejected with a contemptuous Superiority. The Minisry hinted to the Opposition, the Meanness of their Motives to this false Kindness, insisted on the Legality and Necessity of their Conduct, and declared they would not have an Act to indemnify them: And they would scorn to receive this Favour, at the Motion of those Men, who thought they stood in no Need of the like Security in the Case of General-Warrants, which had violated the Letter and Spirit of the Constitution, in the Sense of the Courts of Law, of both Houses of Parliament, and every honest Man in the Kingdom."
